W. P. WALTON.

The Courier-Journal says: "It is now reported from Frankfort that a number of members are considering a proposition to take up the old constitution, strike from it the slavery clause, put in a provision for the secret ballot, provide simpler methods of revision and submit that to the people." This is exactly what should have been done at first, but it is too late now for such a proposition to be entertained by the great body of alleged statesmen. Such a constitution would be adopted almost unanimously by the people, which is more than can be promised for the concern now being brought forth in the pains of a perilous partition. The suggestion is, however, too complete an acknowledgement of failure for the majority of the body to entertain, though the more able and thoughtful members, such as Col. Jacobs, Judge DeHaven and others, take very kindly to it.

And by the way, speaking of the suggestion, it was virtually made by our Lancaster correspondent two months or more ago. Had it been considered then it might have worked. It is too late now to beat any sense in the average member's head.

In their efforts to pass the Force bill, Senator Hoar and his allies kept the Senate in session for 30 consecutive hours, but the democrats were equal to the emergency and prevented the passage of the infamous partisan measure. Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, secured the floor and kept it for 12 solid hours, during which he either spoke or read against the bill. It was hard to keep a quorum on hand, consequently but little was done, only four of the 96 amendments to the bill being disposed of. An effort was being made at last accounts to hold a caucus last night to force the republican opponents into line, but with indifferent success. The bill cannot be passed, unless the rules are changed, an attempt at which will be made to-day.

Surprises come thick and fast in the political world of late and converts to Judge Jewell's theory that "politics is hell" grow apace. Old Granny Blair, he of the educational subsidy bill and other foolish schemes to rob the treasury, who but yesterday thought himself cock of the walk and stratted accordingly, is now among the slain, and after a few brief days his remains will be laid to their final rest. The republican caucus of the New Hampshire legislature nominated Jacob H. Gallinger for U. S. Senator on the second ballot, giving him 24 more than the necessary majority, while old man Blair got only 48. It is no longer an open question whether republicans like republics are ungrateful.

INGALLS' speech in the Senate was far from what it was expected to be—an arrangement of the alliance movement. On the contrary, it was a big bid for the support of its members and a very disgusting exhibition of "crooking the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning." It is too late, however, everlastingly too late, and the only result of his speech is to bring the jayhawker into the contempt of even his own party. The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says it would have been far better for his reputation if it had never been delivered.

FISKE says that they cannot retain Ingalls as Senator by fair means, it is reported that the republicans of the Kansas Senate threatened to adjourn sine die if the alliance members of the House unseat certain republicans. This will prevent a joint session of the legislature for the election of a U. S. Senator and give the republican governor an opportunity to appoint Ingalls for two years more. Beaten at the polls and condemned by popular sentiment, the republicans seem to study nothing else but schemes to thwart the will of the majority.

No matter what is the outcome of the senatorial contest in Illinois, Senator Farwell has bid far-well to every hope. The republican caucus nominated "Uncle Dick" Oglesby, a former Kentuckian, by such a majority that convinced the Senator that he was not in it in any event. The democrats will nominate Gen. Palmer, but as the balance of power is held by three alliance men, who say they will not vote for him, the result is in much doubt.

The Somerset Reporter intimates that it will sue the INTERIOR JOURNAL and Somerset Republican for slander at the next Pulaski circuit court. If the sanctimonious sinner is after money, as he evidently is, we will save him the trouble and expense of a suit by paying him all his character is worth, that is if he has change for 10 cents. Who do you think you can scare, you lecherous old lecher?

Dr. T. J. HOBIGAN, who murdered his brother-in-law in Marion county in 1888, is, after several mistrials, out on $2,500 bail. From the reports at the time the killing was a cold-blooded one, which apparently deserved the halter, but the doctor will never feel it draw now, unless he continues to slay and Judge Lynch fixes him.

GRONCE BANCROFT, the noted statesman and historian, passed to another life Saturday, at the ripe old age of 90 years. His history of the United States was the crowning work of his life, tho' during his long existence he distinguished himself in many posts of honor and trust. He was collector of the port of Boston, democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, secretary of the navy under Polk, the founder of the naval school at Annapolis and minister to Berlin under President Johnson, securing a treaty while holding the latter office, which of itself was enough to make him famous.

Another firm has entered snit in the U. S. Court to test the constitutionality of the McKinley bill, claiming that the duties imposed under it are excessive and that its enactment was irregular. The John Shillito Co., of Cincinnati, has engaged the best lawyers in the case and they assert that they will have no difficulty in showing to the satisfaction of the court everything they claim. This is no political move. It is purely a cold-blooded business transaction, and furnishes the best of evidence that the tariff is a tax and that imposed by the McKinley bill a very onerous one.

The New York Herald does not agree with the cry that the republican party has done nothing. On the contrary it has done three things: It has raised the price of every necessary of life; it has lowered the wages of the working class; it has gagged the minority in the House, and is ready at any moment to perform the same service for the minority in the Senate. We think the republican party has done a good deal. It has done altogether too much. Still, if the people like that sort of thing, why, give them some more.

The Glasgow Times states the case in an eminently correct manner, when it says: "Kentucky is for Cleveland, and not all the disgruntled politicians in the State can prevent its going that way, when the time comes for it to go." It was claimed for a while that the selection of Mr. Watterson as a National committeeman was an anti-Cleveland victory, but he has given that lie by saying that Mr. Cleveland is the logical conclusion of the situation and expressing himself favorably to him.

AFTER two weeks spent in debating the report of the committee on taxation, in the committee of the whole, the whole subject now goes into the convention proper for further discussion, amendment and expurgation. In all other bodies the committee of the whole settles the action on a question, but in the great and awful assembly at Frankfort it only affords that much more time for the display of oratory.

The important news, if true, is sent out from New York that Gov. Hill has consented to accept the U. S. Senatorship and that he would be elected at once. The election is for a successor to Mr. Evans, whose dreary four hours' speech favoring the Force bill last week put members and reporters in a very comatose and tired condition.

BRO. McCARTY prints a biography in a late issue of the Jessamine Journal, which is a very creditable one indeed. It lacks only a cut of his physiognomy to leave no doubt that it is sort of a history of his own life, which we conclude has been far from being a failure.

The Hopkinsville Kentuckian bloomed forth into an illustrated double number Friday, which demonstrated both the capacity of its well-equipped office and the unlimited resources of its talented editor.

NEWSY NOTES.

—A woman of Hiawatha, Kan., hired a poor woman to wash for her at 15 cents an hour, and while the washerwoman was at work, turned the clock back an hour and a half.

—The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has summed up the interstate commerce law in a single sentence: "A State can not by a general law prohibit the importation from another State of an article of commerce and its sale in the original package, but it can regulate the sale."

—Rev. James Stockbridge, a Methodist preacher stationed in McCracken county, is in jail under an indictment charging him with sodomy. He denies his guilt and has brought suit for $5,000 against his supposed chief accuser, alleging malice as the one ground of the charge.

—The opposition to Don Cameron in his own party has nominated A. L. Taggart for U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania and claim that he will win, supported as he is by the granger element. The balloting begins to-day and Don is mighty apt to come out at the big end of the horn.

—Nelson county's old tumble-down court-house, having been condemned, the county court has decided to expend $30,000 on a new one. The oratory of many distinguished men has resounded in the old building and its associations are much more to be prized than its real condition.

—The congressional committee has decided that the salaries of the president, secretaries, etc., of the World's Fair are out of all proportion to their service, from $12,000 to $15,000, and say that at the present rates the large proportion of the appropriation will go into salaries. A new adjustment all around is demanded.

—On Saturday Mr. Aldrich notified the Senate that he would to-day move to change the rules of the Senate. That means, of course, the cloture scheme.

—By a natural gas explosion in Findlay, Ohio, Sunday, the Hotel Marvin was wrecked and two servant girls were killed. It is thought that two other persons were killed and many wounded.

—Gen. Robert E. Lee was born 84 years ago yesterday. The anniversary was celebrated at Petersburg, Va., with a civic and military procession, music, speeches, etc. The speakers selected were Hon. John W. Daniel, of Virginia, and Hon. W. C. P. Brockinridge, of Kentucky. Both are orators of fame.

—Down in Simpson the farmers' alliance voted to expel two of their members, but they refused to vacate the lodge and when an attempt was made to eject them, those who had voted against their expulsion joined in resisting it and a general row ensued, in which pistols were drawn and a bloody riot only averted by the sheriff and posse.

—A sensation has been caused in Paris by the discovery that Gabrielle Bonaparte, the convicted accomplice of Eyraud in the murder of Notary Goffe, is five months advanced in pregnancy. The woman has been in prison a year and the discovery of her condition is expected to lead to some startling revelations in regard to the conduct of the prison officials.

—By the free coinage law passed by the Senate a standard silver dollar is to be 412½ grains and a gold dollar 25.810 grains. Hereafter any owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at any mint of the United States to be formed into standard silver dollars, or bars, for his benefit and without charge. The coinage as to gold is already free.

—Two little children wandered out from their homes in Cincinnati Wednesday and after three days search were found in a vacant house nearly starved to death and the little girl, less than four years old, showing unmistakable signs of having been ravished. Where on earth, except in that miserable city, could such a fiend as committed the crime be found?

—An 11-months-old child at Baltimore was taken sick Friday and a doctor being called, administered an emetic, which brought the following from the little sufferer's stomach: Eighteen pins, four needles, eight tacks, seven wads of paper, two wads of muslin, eight china buttons, a vest button, four pea buttons, a shoe button, a piece of bark, five pieces of cork, a piece of leather, a piece of muck, a shank button, a brass pants button, two pieces of chips and a piece of wrapping cotton.

The Countess of Ravensworth.

The little scene from the life of the late Countess of Ravensworth, who died recently, reads like a chapter of hagiography. The deceased lady joined the Church of Rome in 1879, and was an ardent Catholic. At Ravensworth castle there is a tower mounted by a winding staircase, and in this tower there is a solitary chamber, with concrete floor, without carpet or mat, the furniture consisting solely of a table and chair. Here every morning, winter and summer, without a fire, Lady Ravensworth made her hour's mental prayer from 7 to 8, and again from 6 to 7 in the evening she was in her turret chamber. The morning hour was strictly adhered to, no matter how late the time overnight to which her social duties were prolonged.—Gallagher's Messenger.

Mrs. Kendal's Daughter.

Miss Kendal, the daughter of the English players who have just left this city, went out a great deal while she was here, and entered many good houses. Her manner for so young a girl was remarkably self-possessed and self-contained. She had none of her mother's gesticulations, and she did not "gush" or talk about the stage as Mrs. Kendal does continually.

On the contrary she had quite the air of a brightly young woman of society, and in her dress and conversation was distinctly English. She did not seem at all the sort of young woman who would allow her photographs on sale, as they are, but the professional beauty crazes of London may have hardened her to that sort of thing.—New York Evening Sun.

An Aged Wisconsin Woman.

Probably few of our citizens are aware that there is living in Erin, seven miles southeast of here, a lady who is nearly 114 years old; yet such is a fact. Katie Bauer, who is now living with her son-in-law Joseph Messner, has undisputed evidence that she has attained to that remarkable age. She was born in Baden, Germany, on the 24th of May, 1777. She not only has the family record setting forth the day and year of her birth, but is armed with a certified copy of her baptism taken from the church record of her native parish, which event took place nine days subsequent to her birth. Both documents carry on their face the stamp of antiquity which vouches for their authenticity and genuineness.—Hartford Press.

To Help the Little Work Girls.

The Woman's Alliance of Chicago has called the attention of the health department to the fact that the little cash girls in the big stores in that city are overworked and underpaid. It is said that in some stores they have to work fourteen hours a day for wages averaging from $2.50 to $3 per week; that they are not allowed sufficient time to rest or eat their meals; and that they receive no extra pay for extra labor. The health department has threatened to expose these firms unless the evils complained of are remedied.—Exchange.

—Prof. Koch, of Berlin, describes his lymph as a glycerine extract derived from the pure cultivation of the tubercle bacilli.

Poison in Milk and Cheese.

Cheese that has become rotten often causes serious illness, sometimes due to the formation of trimethyamine or tyrotoxin, which are its putrefactive products. Milk, that universal diet of daily use, may also produce in hot weather the same poison. Its symptoms are nausea, vomiting and fever, followed by great prostration, and it often causes diarrhoea among infants.—Herald of Health.

Smith college has this year an enrollment of 551 students and four post-graduates. Its faculty consists of twenty-nine teachers, and twenty of these are women. Six women are in charge of the college houses, and three of the fifteen trustees of the institution are women.—Mrs. Tucker, of Andover; Kate M. Cone, Ph.D., of Hartford, and Anna L. Dawes, of Pittsfield.

Miss Xavier, who formerly held the position of instructor in Spanish at Wellesley college, has received the appointment of secretary to the French and Spanish consulate, being the first woman ever put in an official place of this kind. Miss Xavier will be able to convey assurances of distinguished consideration in Spanish, French, Italian, German or English.

A Boston lady has given to Mr. Angell, president of the American Humane society, the money to supply every car driver in Boston with a copy of "Black Beauty." Another lady in New York has done the same for the car drivers of one of the principal avenues there, and Mrs. William Astor supplied all the drivers and stable men in Newport with this book.

Fran Sophie Salvanius, an able German woman of letters, has issued an appeal to her countrywomen to reform those national modes of education which consider girls simply as future wives and housekeepers. Their present training, she says, leaves German women without individuality and with painfully low ideals of life.

Mrs. Peel, the wife of the speaker of the house of commons, has just died in England. She is said to have been a very shrewd and clever woman, although not brilliant. She was her husband's constant companion, and the two people lived an unusually harmonious married life.

Mrs. Emily Pfeiffer, the English poetess, who died a few months since, has given all her private fortune, with the consent and approbation of her husband, to various educational and charitable establishments for women. The bequest is valued at £30,000 or £70,000.

Either starched linen collars and cuffs are to be worn with wool dresses this winter; crossway pieces of batiste, or something white to relieve the unbecoming straight band so long in favor.

The Maine lumber camps are unusually bright with women this year. They are housekeepers for their fathers and husbands, and seem to have combined to keep obnoxious characters away.

Clara Belle Dadisman, a New York girl residing in London, is in the list of patents applied for by women. The article Miss Dadisman wants protected is an improved bunnet protector.

Miss Lee, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has won the $1,000 prize offered by The New York Herald for the best American novel.

—Gen. Miles has issued an order to the soldiers, congratulating them on the termination of the war.

—The republican caucus of members of the South Dakota legislature was unable to agree upon a senatorial candidate. It has leaked out that five members refused to vote for Moody under any circumstances and a protracted struggle is certain.
